Lord Byron and his Daughter Ada.

We have touched already on his deep affection for Ada. Mme. Guiccioli tells us that the days in which he received a lock of her hair or her miniature were kept as days of solemnity, and hallowed with inexpressible sadness. Even when in Greece, news of an illness of Ada affected him so deeply that he was not able to continue his journal. "The mother of Ada," he would say to Mme. Guiccioli, "has had the smiles of her childhood and her youth, but the tears of her womanhood will be for me." He felt them springing for him warm and fast, afar across the dark valley of time and through the frozen vapors of death.

Years after, Col. Wildman, the successor of Byron in the proprietorship of Newstead Abbey, met Byron's daughter in the round of London society, and invited her to come and visit the seat of her ancestors. Sixteen months before her death, Lady Lovelace made a visit to Newstead Abbey. In the great library of the Abbey, Col. Wildman read one of the finest passages of Byron to Byron's daughter. Touched with the beauty of the verse, she asked who was the author. "The author?" said Col. Wildman, "There is his portrait," (pointing to the picture of Byron, by Phillips on the wall of the library); and he recited yet more of Byron's poetry to her. Lady Lovelace was mute with astonishment: a new revelation burst in upon her. "Do not think this affectation," she said, "when I tell you I have been brought up in complete ignorance of all that regards my father."

From that moment a passionate enthusiasim for all that recalled the memory of Byron took possession of her She loved to shut herself for long hours in the apartments he had lived in, and which still retained much of the furniture which Byron had touched and used. She loved to sleep in the room in which he had slept. She gave herself up to lonely meditations on his exiled fate and his premature end, and endeavoured, with intense yearning, out of the association of scenes over which his memory lingered, to extract some of that tendernes of which she had been deprived—some participation in the glory of a great existence. From that time all other charms of life became insipid and colorless before her. This child of Byron was inconsolable. She had been cruelly disinherited and robbed of the most priceless treasure which it was in the power of heaven to bestow upon her—the parental affection of the noblest, most generous, truest, and most loving heart which ever beat in the bosom of a man. She waned and pined away and fell ill, very ill—so ill that she knew she must die; and then she wrote to Col. Wildman a letter, begging him as a favour to let her be buried by the side of her father. "Yes, I will be buried there—not where my mother can join me, but by the side of him who so loved me, and whom I was not taught to love; and this reunion of our bodies in the grave shall be an emblem of the union of our spirits in the bosom of the Eternal." Byron was more than avenged. The father and daughter lie side by side in the village church of Hacknall.—Belgravia for February.

A citizen of Chicago used to go home late, slightly inebriated, and take a lunch usually set out for him by his considerate wife. One night, beside the usual dish of cabbage and pork she set a wash-bowl filled with caps in starch. The lamp had long been extinguished when the staggering sot returned home, and, by mistake, when proceeding to satisfy his hunger, he stuck his fork into the wrong dish. he worked away at his mouthful of caps very patiently for some time, but, finally, being unable to masticate them, he said to his wife, "Old woman, where did you get your cabbage? They are so darned stringy that I can't chew them." "My gracious!" she replied, "if the stupid feller ain't eating up all my caps that I put in starch over night!"

Pauperism-Emigration.

With her forty odd colonies, nearly all stretching out their arms for emigration, one would imagine that the policy of Great Britain would be to transfer her redundant population to these new fields. Indeed one might almost suppose such to be one of the primary objects of maintaining, at such an enormous expense, her immense outlying possessions—that, as the husbandman thins out his turnip-rows, transferring the spare plants to new ground, the Government might keep constantly thinning out the dense population of the old country in order to prevent undue rankness and consequent deterioration, disease and crime. Thus, not only would a better crop be ensured on the original soil, but valuable auxiliary crops would be produced in the new fields. No such policy would appear to have found a place in the Imperial brain. What is the result? England and Wales, with an area of 58,325 square miles, groan under a population of 17,023,-768, or upwards of three hundred to the square mile or, worse still, in the city of London alone there are huddled together upon an area of seventy square miles no fewer than 2,8000,000 souls! Compare these figures with the condition of things in British America. Ontario has a population of 15 souls to the square mile, Quebec, 6; New Brunswick, 11; Nova Scotia, 21; giving the average for the Dominion at 10 souls to the square mile. Prince Edward Island has a population of 44 souls to the square mile; Newfoundland, 3; British Columbia, one to every five square miles; Rupert's Land, one to every fifty square miles. This gives a general average for British North America of one soul to the square mile! Three hundred souls to the square mile in England and Wales; two hundred and fifty-three souls to the square mile in the United Kingdom, and only one solitary soul to the square mile in British America! How fearfully rank must be the growth in the old world, and what enormous waste of valuable soil in the new. Turn we now to the consequences of the overcrowding in the Old Country. Last year pauperism cost England and Wales alone the sum of £10,692,-188, sterling in direct rates, to say nothing of large sums given in charity, and of the cost to the nation in crime, disease and death, making at least half as much more. Oh! the untold, the indiscribable misery suggested by these figures! Taking the very lowest view of this subject, would it not be cheaper to transfer the redundant population to the colonies than to regulate and relieve it at home? The fifteen millions expended every year would have sent five million emigrants to Canada, or half a million to British Columbia. We do not mean to advocate anything so ridiculous as the sending out of anything like even the latter number in one year. Nor do we mean to say that any single colony or, indeed, all the colonies put together, would be able or willing to receive all England's paupers in one year, or in any given space of time. As a class of emigrants they would by no means be in great demand. Our remarks aim at prevention rather than cure. A well digested national system for promoting assisted emigration to the colonies, so regulated as to keep the population of the old country from rising above a standard commensurate with the capacity of the country to afford employment and proper maintenance, would gradually but surely depauperize it. Suppose the machinery were set in motion and a certain percentage of the poor-rate fund devoted towards it, the material out of which the ranks of pauperism are recruited would be dried up, and pauperism itself gradually become extinct—a thing of the past. Thus would prevention be found cheaper and better than cure. Just fancy England without a pauper—London sans pauperism! Viewed from the higher and more philanthropic stand-point, how important the result. Millions of human creatures, instead of being conceived in poverty, brought forth in the rags and squallor of a filthy garret or a noisome cellar, and dragging out a short but weary and wretched existence in ignorance and crime, would grow up in the pure atmosphere and green fields of a new country, intelligent, moral and prosperous, an element of strength and a source of credit and prosperity to the nation, instead of, as now, a source of weakness, expense and discredit. The old country freed from overcrowding, pauperism and crime; the new, populated and reclaimed; the solitary places made glad and the desert made to blossom as the rose. Government would thus fulfill its highest duty, by promoting in the highest degree the good of the subject. Returning to the homely figure of the husbandman, it does appear marvelous that, with such a breadth of colonial ground lying waste, Britannia should so long have permitted such a fatal overcrop at home, should not long since have adopted the system of thinning out and transfering the redundant plants to colonial soil. With how much happier results might the fifteen millions a year, now spent in a very imperfect attempt at regulating and mitigating pauperism, be employed in assisting the surplus population of Great Britain to establish new and happy homes for themselves in the colonies. Instead of being content with mitigating an evil, how much better and more worthy of our great nation to transform positive evil into positive good.

One Advantage.

Amongst the numerous influences certain to be exerted by the establishment of railway communication across the continent, there is one, the benefits of which we may not unreasonably hope to share. Many persons of prominence, both in the Eastern States and Canada, and even in trans-Atlantic countries, will be induced to take a run over and see the Pacific. In this way much of the ignorance which exists respecting this part of the world will be speedily dispelled, and a superior class of immigration will be promoted. It is surprising how little this climate and the conditions which make it what it is, are understood. Most people, judging only by the arbitrary parallels of latitude, think of British Columbia as a sort of second Siberia, scarcely fit for human habitation. The influences and agents which contribute towards giving British Columbia one of the most genial climates in the world are well described in a recent treatise on ocean currents, from which we may be permitted to make the following extract:—

"There exists in the Pacific a stream acting under nearly similar conditions with that on the Atlantic side. Maury, in his Sailing Directions, satisfactorily explains the moderate temperature of the North Pacific by the immense warm ocean current flowing from the coasts of India and China toward the American coast. 'This stream,' he says, 'escapes from the Straits of Malacca, and, being joined by others from the Java and China Seas, passes out into the Pacific like another gulf stream, between the Philippines and the shores of Asia, whence it attempts the great circle route for the Aleutian Islands, tempering climates and flowing toward the northwest coast of America;' and he then proceeds to describe the points of resemblance between this ocean current and the gulf stream of the Atlantic. The Pacific stream may be traced for thousands of miles by its temperature and even by the altered color of its waters. It sweeps over from the Japanese coast towards the north, against the bend of the continent, to Russian America, where it is turned to the southward along the coasts of Oregon, California and Mexico."

Dominion Day.

MR. EDITOR,—Presuming you are a Confederationist, I have been expecting to see something in your columns about the propriety of celebrating "Dominion Day." This community is great on holidays and celebrations, and it has occurred to me that the celebration of the 1st July would certainly not be less appropriate than the celebration of the 4th. Every good and loyal British American must admit that the 1st of July commemorates an event of which he may justly feel proud, a day which it is fair to assume will be celebrated by unborn millions down to the end of time.

Would not it be well, then, that we should mark the great event of the Confederation of the British Provinces of North America by a public celebration? The day will be celebrated, I have reason to believe, at every important place on the Mainland. Why should Victoria occupy an exceptional position?

Englishmen, equally with Colonists—we are all Colonists here—would, of course, join in such a celebration.

The British Columbian.

THURSDAY, MAY 20, 1869.

Municipal Council.

Council met at 7½ P.M. His Worship the Mayor in the chair.

Councellors present: McKay, Russell, Allsop and Gerow.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

A Communication from the Colonial Secretary, advising the City Council of the adoption of the Revenue and Health bye-laws, was read.

His Worship the Mayor remarked that the Health bye-law, as sanctioned by the Executive Council, was in one section antagonistic to the Ordinance under which it was formed. On motion, the communication was ordered to be placed on file.

Accounts, from the British Columbian newspaper for $20 dollars, from British Colonist for $29 50, in addition to an outstanding balance of $37 50, from Mr. Story $5,37 were read and, upon motion, referred to the Finance Committee for payment out of the first available funds.

The Street Committee reported that permission could not be given to the proprietor of the Australian House to cut the railing of James Bay Bridge, as a few planks laid at this end of the bridge would answer every necessary purpose.

On motion it was resolved that a Committee be appointed to draft a bye-law to establish a general grade for the streets of the city. Councellors McKay, Russel Allsop were appointed as such Committee.

Councellor Russell stated that the street committee would make a thorough examination into the state of the sidewalks throughout the city and make a report thereon.

Council adjourned to meet on Tuesday next at 7 P.M., or at the call of the Mayor.

YALE.—The following condensed summary is taken from the Examiner of Monday:—During the week 126,000 lbs. of freight was shipped for the interior. Quite a handsome sum has been subscribed for the purpose of celebrating the Queen's Birthday. During the day horse races, foot-races, &c., will take place, and salutes will be fired. In the evening a display of fireworks will take place on the opposite side of the river, accompanied by balloon ascensions.——On Wednesday, of last week, the body of an Indian was found floating in the river opposite the town. It was identified as the body of a Thompson River Indian, drowned some eight months ago, above Chapman's Bar.——The Government intend immediately to put men on the Hope-Kootenay trail, and have it put in a thorough state of repair.——The mountains above Lytton are on fire.....The Hon. Mr. O'Reilly held County Court at Lytton last week. There were six civil cases, but none of them evolving anything of general public interest. One Indian liquor case was brought before the Magistrate's Court, but was postponed in consequence of the illness of the Defendant.

AN ANOMALY.—The United States of America is a great and free country doubtless; and Americans are never tired of telling the rest of the world that they are the greatest and freest people in creation. There is, however, one item in the very small telegram which reached us last night, which hardly harmonizes with these pretentions. It is announced with due circumstance that a new whipping-post and pillory have been erected in the Newcastle jail, in the State of Deleware, and that they were inaugurated with the usual ceremonies. The telegraph is silent as to the nature of these inauguration ceremonies, but it may be presumed that they were of a very impressive character, and everyway befitting so very solemn and important an occasion. We hear a great deal about the 'Stars and Stripes;' but, in the State of Deleware, the stripes would appear to be of rather a practical sort, and it is presumable that when vigorously applied, will bring out the stars.

EXCURSION TRIP.—The steamer Wilson G. Hunt will make an excursion trip next week, in order to give parties from Washington Territory an opportunity to visit this city, and witness the races and other sports to be given in celebration of the Queen's Birthday. The steamer will leave Olympia on Sunday the 23d, at noon, and will touch at Seattle, Port Madison, Port Gamble, Port Ludlow, and Port Townsend the same evening; will remain at Port Townsend all night, and leave that Port on Monday morning and arrive here early in the day. As there will doubtless be quite a number of Americans coming over upon the occasion, we venture to suggest that proper attention should be paid them, with a view to rendering the visit as agreeable on both sides as possible. The celebration, both on Monday and Tuesday, will be well worth seeing, and we have no doubt those who may come over will be much pleased. At any rate it is fitting that every courtesy should be extended to them.

DOMINION DAY.—We quite agree with "British American" that there would appear to be no good reason why "Dominion Day," as it is called, should not be kept. It was celebrated last year at New Westminster, Yale and Cariboo, and doubtless will be again. Whatever diversity of opinion may exist as to the advisability of our immediately entering the Union, it must be admitted by all that the completion of the Confederation of the Eastern Provinces is an event in the history of British America worthy to be commemorated. It is not improbable that the 1st of July next may be selected as the day upon which the Great North-West will be declared a part of the Dominion.

Bankruptcy Court.

(Before His Lordship Chief Justice Needham)

Tuesday May 19th 1869.

In Re William Lyons. His Lordship approved of the resolution of settlement which had been made by the creditors of Lyons, and it was ordered that the sum of $1100 be distributed by the Official Assignee, on Friday next, pro rata, to the creditors who had proven their claims.

ANOTHER EXTRACT.—We have already given several extracts from a very important paper, read by Mr. Westgarth, before the Colonial Society. Considerations of space alone prevent our publishing that paper in its entirety. Here is another extract which will be read with interest, as showing how much more appreciative some Englishmen are than other:

"The enlarged and varied field supplied by the Colonial Empire has some further results of this active public life which goes on outside of us. We are farmiliar with the many case of those who emigrate from us empty to return full, who go forth to make money and return to spend it; return home, as they pleasantly and significantly phrase it. Often, however, they are able to acquire something still more valuable than money, when they do not limit themselves, in their objects and acquisitions, to merely mercantile success. We have not far to search for instances where colonists, stored with those experiences that are supplied from the external British field, return amongst us to assume a first position in the Empire."

FROM NEW WESTMINSTER.—The str. Enterprise, Capt. Swanson, returned from New Westminster at 3 o'clock yesterday. Among the passengers were Capt Ewing, Mr. and Mrs. Grelley and Mrs. Syme. The steamer brought Barnard's Yale Express and local mails, but no news of importance. A Summary of Yale items will be found elsewhere.

THE RAIN.—It is fair to say that the rain which has fallen in the past two days is worth many thousands of dollars to this colony. Everywhere crops were becoming stunted and sickly for lack of moisture. Now the soil is quite moist to a depth of eight or ten inches, and crops look green and healthy. From the surrounding districts we hear the most cheering news.

TOO MUCH LIGHTNING.—A large budget of news was reported at Seattle last night, but owing to the prevalence or electricity in the atmosphere, its transmission was found to be impossible. All that the operator here could succeed in getting over the wires was the few lines which will be found elsewhere.

AN ADDITIONAL RACE.—Through the liberality of His Excellency, Governor Seymour, the Committee have been enabled to add another race to the programme for the 24th. The Governor's Purse of $40, with sweepstakes of $5 each. Winners of $50 once, 5lbs.; twice, or $100, 10lbs extra: 9 stone 7lbs, 1 mile.

A SENSIBLE MOVE.—It will be seen by reference to the report of the proceedings that the City Council has taken the initiary steps towards establishing a general grade for the streets. This should have been done long ago.

ALIVE TO DUTY.—We are glad to see that the City Council is alive to the duty of adopting timely precautionary measures for promoting the public health, as well as protecting the shins of pedestrians.

THE HOPE-KOOTENAY TRAIL.—The public will be glad to learn that the Government has at length determined to put this trail in order. The loss to the Colony from the absence of any facile communication with our southern mines has been very serious.

COMMITTEE MEN ATTENTION!—We are desired to state that the members of the Regatta Committee are requested to meet at the Bee Hive Hotel, at 8:30 this evening. Punctual attendance is particularly requested.

CONFIRMED.—The sale of the Brig Byzantium was yesterday confirmed by His Honor Chief Justice Needham, and the transfer of the vessel was duly made to the purchaser, Capt. Rufus Calhoun.

UNCERTAIN.—The str. Gussie Telfair should be about due here, provided she has suffered no detention; but, owing to storms and lightning, we are kept in ignorance of her movements.

FOR OLYMPIA.—The Wilson G. Hunt will leave for Ports on Puget Sound, to-day at 12 o'clock, noon.

FOR NEW WESTMINSTER.—The steamer Enterprise will sail for New Westminster to-morrow morning at 3 o'clock.

Ever Ready.

In our yesterday's issue an item appeared to the effect that the Hook & Ladder Company would be "out of service" for a week, while their appliances were undergoing repair. The item, trifling as it might have appeared to the cursory reader, was of serious import, as it was suggestive of the unavailability of that most useful organization, in the event of a fire occurring during the week. It would appear, however, from the subjoined note, from the efficient Foreman, which we insert with pleasure, that although a portion of the apparatus is undergoing repairs, yet the Company have taken good care to retain their efficiency, and are ever ready to do their duty:

MR. EDITOR,—The statement you made in this morning's paper, that the Union Hook & Ladder Company would be out of service for one week, is an error. The Truck will take a few days to repair; the Ladders and Hooks will remain at the Truck House, and the Company will be in readiness in case of necessity.
